One of the oldest writers conferences in America
Welcome to the 2024 Cape Cod Writers Center Conference
August 1-4, 2024 • The Emerald Resort /Irish Village at Hyannis

Welcome to the 61st Cape Cod Writers Center Conference. Decades ago, when a small group of writers founded the first summer conference, the idea that a set of electronic circuits known as the computer would threaten literary talent then seemed laughable. But today the threat of AI has become all too real. The recent SAG strike in Hollywood and protests by the Authors Guild prompted new Congressional bills which are now insisting upon guidelines to control it. You, too, may have similar fears but may already be using AI to assist your writing.

Artificial Intelligence has unquestionable benefits but there is one thing that a machine, regardless of its ability to learn and imitate, cannot replicate. Passion: that very human emotion which drives you to express your unique perceptions in print. That’s the same passion which will bring you to Hyannis from August 1-4 to study with our talented author-instructors, refine your literary skills, and learn how to promote your work.

As you browse through this brochure, we hope you will find courses that help support your passion for the written word. Our 27 offerings include literary genres from fiction, nonfiction, memoir, screenwriting and poetry to publicity and promotion. Among them are classes on socially conscious fiction, the art of dialogue, playing with words in poetry, creative nonfiction, humor writing and an agent panel. Some are consecutive three-time or two-time sessions. Other courses are offered only once, but all are taught by acclaimed author-teachers, social media experts, and literary agents.

In keeping with the relaxed ambiance of the Cape, the conference supports a warm, friendly atmosphere for participants regardless of their status as beginners, second career writers, or published authors. Our well-attended classes are small enough to provide you with individual attention from our instructors. If you want a still closer look at your work, we suggest that you sign up for a manuscript mentoring session with an agent or faculty member. Please find an explanation on page 15 about how to do that along with a list of mentors. We also want to remind you that scholarships are available for aspiring and second career writers. See the details on page 4.

We hope that you will join us at the conference where you will have a unique opportunity to either discover your passion or rekindle it.

Remember: Registration officially ends on July 25th, so sign up soon.

William Martin

Across a career now in its fifth decade, William Martin has written twelve novels, an award-winning PBS documentary, book reviews, magazine articles, and a cult-classic horror movie, too.

His first novel, Back Bay, spent fourteen weeks on the New York Times Best Seller List and established him as “a master storyteller”. He’s been following the lives of the great and anonymous in American history ever since, taking readers from the Mayflower in Cape Cod to the White House Christmas celebration in December ’41 to the South Tower on 9/11 in City of Dreams. He has told big stories on broad canvases, so big that Publisher’s Weekly once called him “a writer whose smoothness matches his ambition,” and the Providence Journal dubbed him “king of the historical thriller.”

His work has garnered many awards, including the 2005 New England Book Award, given to an author “whose body of work stands as a significant contribution to the culture of the region”; the 2015 Samuel Eliot Morison Award; and the 2018 Robert B. Parker Award from the New England Chapter of the Mystery Writers of America.

He lectures widely, has taught writing from Harvard to Hawaii, and serves on the boards of many of Boston’s historical and cultural institutions. He lives near Boston with his wife, has three grown children, and keeps a boat on Cape Cod Bay.

Where Do You Get Your Ideas?

That’s the most commonly asked question for any writer, perhaps because it goes straight to the heart of creativity . . .

You know that idea is out there, floating in the ether. It may be a neat plot hook, or a childhood memory, or something you recently read, or an obscure historical event that’s always fascinated you.

But how do you recognize it? And where do you find the motivation to write it? And how do you turn the perspiration of writing into further inspiration to keep you writing until you’ve written all the way to the end?

William Martin will take you on an eclectic tour of some of the places where he’s found inspiration and motivation. He’ll help you to identify your own sources of creativity. He’ll talk about the hard questions that you need to ask yourself, so that when inspiration fades, motivation will remain high and fresh ideas will flow with the perspiration of writing. And he’ll give you the tools to finish that book.

THREE SESSION COURSES

Memoir  Dorian Fox  Aug. 2-4  8-10 am
Writing memoir is more than retelling events; it’s an opportunity to find meaning from experience, to discover the moments and forces that shaped us. In this workshop, we’ll do just that, using prompts to explore key memories, with an eye to the larger story those pieces tell. We’ll also dive into craft, learning how to deepen scenes, approach book structure, and identify a memoir’s thematic heart. You’ll leave with fresh pages and a wealth of tips to carry your project forward.

Mystery Writing  Susan Breen  Aug. 2-4  8-10 am
Mystery novels veer from gentle cozies to Icelandic noir. But always they are about matters of life and death. This is why readers continue to love them. So how do you write the best mystery possible? Through a mixture of writing exercises and lectures, this class will examine the essential elements of mystery writing: character development, plotting, and that all important question: should you use poison or a gun?

Shifting Perspective in Socially Conscious Fiction  Nancy Agabian  Aug. 2-4  8-10 am
This workshop will explore how shifts in craft elements can facilitate stories addressing social justice and change. Generative writing exercises will experiment with shifts in point of view (grammatical and political), character (individual and collective) and others TBD. Short readings by bell hooks, Ismet Prcic, Ruth Ozeki and others will provide inspiration. Supportive on-the-spot feedback will offer a path forward.

Magic Marketing  Jennifer Wilkov  Aug. 2-4  8-10 am
Authors know that marketing their books is 100% their responsibility but most don’t have the skill set or knowledge to create a winning marketing plan for their project. It’s time to build a plan to successfully market your book that can save you time, energy and money and can ensure you get results during the most pivotal times.

Narrative Non-Fiction That Excites  Diane O’Connell  Aug. 2-4  8-10 am
This hands-on workshop, taught by a former Random House editor with over 30 years’ experience in helping authors shape their stories, will help you structure your story so that it is clearly focused and invites the reader in. Through instruction and writing exercises, you will learn how to: use fiction techniques to make your story come alive, avoid common pitfalls of incorporating research and exposition, edit effectively and write a book proposal.

Voice in Nonfiction  Sara Rauch  Aug. 2-4  8-10 am
Looking to make your nonfiction stand out? Finding a distinctive voice is one of the most important steps you can take. Whether you’re writing personal narrative or researched nonfiction (or something in between!), a strong voice establishes authority and style. In this class, we’ll discuss strategies for developing and implementing an engaging voice to carry a compelling story.

“What’s So Funny? How to Write Humor Without Really Trying.”  Jerry Zezima  Aug. 2-4  10:15 am –12:15pm
You don’t have to be a great wit to be a funny writer. Jerry Zezima, a noted half-wit, will show you how. He writes a nationally syndicated humor column because he is spectacularly unqualified to do anything else. Be prepared to laugh and learn in this instructive and entertaining class.
THREE SESSION COURSES (cont’d)

Audio Books  Nancy Bober  Aug. 2-4  10:15 am-12:15 pm
In this workshop we will learn the steps that a narrator takes to produce an audiobook for an author. We will touch on communication and relationships, platforms that are available and the concerns involved with the use of each. If time allows, Nancy will discuss pitfalls to be aware of in the audio production and rights holders world, as well as finishing up with an overview of how production choices may influence sales.

Say What? The Art of Dialogue  Nicole Blades  Aug. 2-4  10:15 am-12:15 pm
What distinguishes powerful dialogue in fiction from real life speech? Writing great dialogue for your stories is about developing or refining your creative skills to build compelling, action-driving, thought-provoking, familiar yet unique and memorable dialogue. This workshop will help students understand the key elements of writing provocative speech and how to shape their tools to build dialogue rooted in the real world that leaps off the page, keeping readers wanting more.

Playing with Words in Poetry  Ben Berman  Aug. 2-4  10:15 am-12:15 pm
Writing, of course, is serious work; but it can also be serious play! In this workshop, we are going to think about the role of word play in poetry and how it has the potential to add wit, create layers of meaning, and complicate the tone of our writing. We will read and discuss poems that play with language in interesting ways and will experiment with various techniques of our own.

Telling Stories on Screen  Kuros Charney  Aug. 2-4  10:15 am-12:15 pm
A great screenplay shows us the movie in our heads as we read. In this course, we’ll learn techniques for telling stories fit for the screen. We’ll cover topics from script format to three-act plot structure to character arc to the anatomy of a scene. We’ll also touch on the elements and practical concerns of different genres.

Young Adult Fiction  David Yoo  Aug. 2-4  10:15 am-12:15 pm
A good beginning woos the reader into a YA novel, but it also very quickly establishes the protagonist, the setting, and the POV, thoroughly rooting the reader in the world of that particular story. We will examine/discuss beginnings from increasingly macro lenses, starting with the opening sentence, then the opening paragraph, then the entire beginning itself.

TWO SESSION COURSES

Let’s Take It Back: Using Character Backstory to Guide You Forward  Nicole Blades  Aug. 2 & 3  3-5 pm
In this workshop, we’ll explore developing and shaping your plot based on your protagonist’s motives. We will review the essentials of character and explore techniques to help develop your story’s structure. Whether you are a meticulous outliner or an intuitive writer, we’ll work through the specific steps of designing the plot, timeline, and pacing for your work so you can unlock the flow of ideas into a strong, compelling story.

Revision Workshop  Nancy Agabian  Aug. 2 & 3  3-5 pm
Through a systemized set of exercises, you’ll receive guidance on how to revise your essay or short story work-in-progress between 1000 – 3000 words. We will spend the first session starting the revision process, you’ll continue for homework, then return to report back on your experience and/or receive feedback. A collaborative supportive learning space, especially for those who are revision-averse.
TWO SESSION COURSES (cont’d)

Writing Real Characters  David Yoo  Aug. 2 & 3  3-5 pm
To write characters well you have to make them real. In this workshop we will explore all the facets of a real character. We will discuss the differences between round and flat characters; adding specificity to your portrayal; identifying characters’ desires and the changes they make in the course of the story. However, creating fully fleshed-out characters in your mind is only the first step; the real challenge is then figuring out how to get them down on the page. We will discuss in depth just how we go about revealing characters on the page.

Dialogue in Screenwriting  Kuros Charney  Aug. 2 & 3  3-5 pm
Effective dialogue can make your screenplay shine, whether you’re writing an intense drama or a hilarious comedy. Learn techniques for writing dialogue that’s both thrilling and realistic. We’ll cover dialogue’s connection to character, action, pacing, subtext, and more. By exploring the fundamentals of compelling dialogue, as well as the differences between cinematic dialogue and real speech, you’ll learn tips to bolster your dialogue not only in film and TV but in all storytelling forms.

Stage to Page  Marcella Pixley  Aug. 2 & 3  3-5 pm
In this intensive writing workshop, we will use Hagen and Stanislavsky’s acting method, to create psychologically complex characters with compelling motivations and conflicts. We will experiment with different techniques to interview our characters and reveal what they want most of all. By the end of the workshop, you will have an intimate understanding of who your character is, what they want, and what they are willing to risk in order to achieve their dreams.

ONE SESSION COURSES

Agent Panel:  Valerie Borchardt, Tom Miller & Gina Panettieri  Fri., Aug. 2  12:45-2:45 pm
In this workshop three agents will explain how they work, what attracts them to certain projects, leads to them pass on others, how to win their attention and what to avoid. After their presentations a Q & A follows so please bring your questions to this important presentation.

First Sentences that Make Us Keep Reading  Diane O’Connell  Fri., Aug. 2  12:45-2:45 pm
In fiction, every word serves a purpose, every sentence propels the reader to the next, and the next, and the next. And it all begins with the first words on the first page. Opening sentences set the stage as they bring us inside. If novels are split-level, five-bedroom homes are ones in which we lose ourselves down hallways and up staircases.

Memorable Scenes  Susan Breen  Fri., Aug. 2  12:45-2:45 pm
The more great scenes your novel has the better it will be. It’s as simple as that. So how do you write a great scene? Through reading great scenes and doing writing exercises, participants will learn how to make every scene as powerful as it can be.
ONE SESSION COURSES (cont’d)

Objectivity in Narrative Nonfiction Sara Rauch  Fri., Aug. 2 12:45-2:45 pm
In a world of fake news and AI-generated content, objectivity in narrative nonfiction is more important than ever. In this session, we’ll cover how to conduct impartial research, establish credible sources, interrogate our own biases, and develop an objective language to produce articles, essays, and true stories that make rigorous, conscientious use of factual information.

Crafting Personal Essays Dorian Fox  Fri., Aug. 2 12:45-2:45 pm
The best personal essays bridge self and world, using intimate experience to throw light on society, culture and human nature. In a current climate where “truth” often seems up for grabs, telling honest, thoughtful personal stories is needed even more than ever. In this course, we’ll read several exemplary short essays and examine what makes them so effective, incisive, and moving. Then you’ll write the beginnings of your own essay, and receive on-the-spot feedback to help spur you on.

Writing the Synopsis Jennifer Wilkov  Fri., Aug. 2 12:45-2:45 pm
If you have a manuscript or screenplay and are preparing to submit your book or pitch deck, you need an impactful, thoughtfully crafted synopsis to convey your story clearly. Learn how to make your synopsis stand out with writing that packs a powerful punch that will impress any agent, publisher or producer.

How to Get Published in Newspapers, Magazines, and Maybe Even Books Jerry Zezima  Fri., Aug. 2 12:45-2:45 pm
You’ve written something you think other people would want to read. How do you convince an editor to publish it? Jerry Zezima, who has housebroken several pets with his writings, will give you tips on the best ways to break into print without getting all smudged with ink. And you might even get paid!

How a Poem Moves Ben Berman  Fri., Aug. 2 3-5 pm
We all want to write moving poems, but in this workshop we will focus on how a poem moves. Thinking about a poem’s form helps shape its meaning. We will be reading and discussing poems written in various organic forms – examining their invisible threads and associative leaps – and will be emulating these approaches in poems of our own.

Query Workshop Gina Panettieri  Fri., Aug. 2 3-5 pm
The road to publication starts with a winning query letter! Learn the elements necessary in a compelling query letter, the top do’s and don’ts you need to be aware of, and how to use great comp titles and market research to convince your reader. Learn the best tools for researching who to query and how to structure a savvy query and submission list that will enhance your chances, as well as best strategies for handling multiple queries.

Writing the Nonfiction Proposal Gina Panettieri  Sat., Aug. 3 3-5 pm
Most nonfiction sells on a proposal, so it’s essential to learn how to build a proposal that hits all the right notes and can convince your reader that this is the right book, at the right time, and YOU’RE just the right person to write it! We’ll be discussing the essential elements you must build into your proposal, how detailed you need to get, how to make the most of what you bring to the equation, and more! Learn how to research those all-important comp titles and what goes into a solid platform!

History of the Cape Cod Writers Center

In retrospect it was sheer genius that in late 1962 a group of writers called the Twelve O’Clock Scholars realized that the Cape’s inviting beaches, quaint towns, and literary traditions were the perfect setting for a conference. Led by author Marion Vuilleumier, the Twelve O’Clock Scholars promptly invited literary-minded residents to the first conference in August 1963. Among the earlier teachers and admirers were Isaac Asimov, Art Buchwald, Kurt Vonnegut, and Jacques Barzun.

That first conference was so popular that the founders soon expanded the Writers Center into a year-round program which hosted literary workshops, panel discussions, evening lectures, manuscript evaluations and even a literary anthology. By the 1980s the Writers Center programs added an author-interview cable television program called Books and the World, a Young Writers set of classes, a Meet the Author Breakfast, and even a literary workshop aboard the Queen Elizabeth 2.

Over the last few decades the computer replaced the typewriter, the electronic bookstore replaced many brick-and-mortar shops, audio versions of an author’s work became a new sales device and authors found they are speaking to their fans on Zoom as well as in person. Despite warp speed of these changes the Cape Cod Writers Center has not only survived but thrived. Today we are a nationally recognized literary organization which offers monthly meetings, small writing groups, seminars, a Young Writers program, and a vibrant summer conference.

We hope that you will not only enjoy the 2024 conference, but participate in our other programs during the year.
